

French Brass Barograph

A French early 20th century barograph in a simple lacquered brass case.

The case has beveled glasses to all five sides, in a polished and lacquered brass frame on a solid brass base. The lid hinges to give access for winding and changing the papers.

The eight day movement is contained within the brass drum which carries the recording paper. The aneroid barometer movement has a four-capsule vacuum stack linked to the ink-filled recording nib. The barograph and clock movements are overhauled and guaranteed for 3 years.

Complete with winding key, and a full set of recording papers.
